Eline Powell swims again as Freeform's 'Siren' returns

By Jay Bobbin

Eline Powell returns in Season 2 of "Siren," which begins Thursday on Freeform.

When you're playing a mermaid, it certainly helps to like water.

It's a good thing that Eline Powell does, since she's spent more than her fair share of time in it for Freeform's fantasy-drama series "Siren," which begins its second season Thursday, Jan. 24. She resumes the role of Ryn, who now has more of her own kind to deal with — and their agenda might not be a friendly one. Alex Roe and Fola Evans-Akingbola also continue as researchers who try to help Ryn navigate her existence in the town of Bristol Cove.

"The water is my best friend at this point," the pleasant Powell confirms. "Natural ocean water is really cold, but they heat up the tank sometimes, and that's quite a nice experience."

Powell reports that evoking a mermaid as naturally as possible has gotten easier: "That goes with the show training me and our just shooting so much, but I've also gotten my freediving license and my scuba-diving license, and I'm starting to notice that my eyesight is better under water and that I can hold my breath longer. It really feels like my body is adapting more and more ... which is great, because we want to do better and better with the scenes."

While "Siren" has put her front-and-center, the Belgian-born Powell also is known for her relatively brief stint on HBO's "Game of Thrones," on which she played Bianca of Braavos during the sixth season.

"I always assumed that because the length of which I was on screen for that was so tiny, nobody would really make anything of it," Powell reflects, "but it's still something that people remember me for. I'm very grateful, and I'm glad I can say that I was in 'Game of Thrones.' It's really quite sweet, though 'Siren' will be the one that lasts a bit longer for me."

While she's happy with her identification with her current show, Powell also appreciates what her family is known for. Her pharmacologist father founded a biotech company (with her mother) in their homeland and a molecular diagnostic company in Switzerland, and he has been a leading force in the treatment of the HIV virus.

"I love talking about them, because I am so proud of them," Powell says. "They've achieved so much by just following their dreams, and I wanted to do something that I could do all on my own. And now, I'm living my dream, but our phone calls are very different."

"My father will call and say, 'I am traveling to Africa to help with this new fever outbreak.' And I will say, 'Oh, Dad, that's great! I put on a mermaid tail and swam around.'"

Television and movie comedian Ernie Kovacs is remembered by TCM

By Jay Bobbin

He was ahead of his time, but in his time, Ernie Kovacs was one of comedy's most unique talents. With his work commemorated by several home-video collections over the past several years — including the recent "Ernie Kovacs: The Centennial Edition" — the iconoclastic and innovative Kovacs is remembered by Turner Classic Movies with a full night of his late-1950s and early-1960s television programs and feature films Wednesday, Jan. 23, the exact 100th anniversary of his birth. The lineup includes three episodes of "The Ernie Kovacs Show" first broadcast by ABC, plus the movies "Operation Mad Ball" (with Kovacs as a military-hospital officer in a rivalry with fellow soldier Jack Lemmon), "Wake Me When It's Over" (as another officer privy to a scheme by draftee Dick Shawn), "Bell Book and Candle" (a witchcraft comedy reteaming Kovacs with Lemmon, and also starring James Stewart and Kim Novak) and "Five Golden Hours" (with con man Kovacs' game called by savvy baroness Cyd Charisse). Kovacs reveled in doing the unexpected, making it remarkable that writers and directors could rein him in enough to follow pre-written movie scripts. That yen dated back to his early work for a radio station in Trenton, N.J., where he tried to capture the feeling of being hit by a train — getting off the tracks just in time — among his segments. Several years in local Philadelphia television, where Kovacs interacted with created characters as well as actual viewers, prepped him to go to New York in the early 1950s. A CBS job turned out to be brief, but he stayed in the game by continuing to do TV for various outlets (encompassing a literal game, ABC's "Take a Good Look"). A fill-in host for Steve Allen on NBC's original incarnation of "The Tonight Show," Kovacs is cited by many as having really come into his own with the series of monthly ABC specials collectively known as "The Ernie Kovacs Show." Those programs crystallized everything Kovacs liked to do, experimenting with sound, music, editing and special effects ... and even having total control over the commercials he did for his sponsor, Dutch Masters cigars.

Kovacs won an Emmy Award for the series, but tragically, what his additional output might have been was curtailed by his death in a 1962 car accident after he attended a baby shower for showbiz icon Milton Berle and his wife. (Kovacs' wife, singer-actress Edie Adams, had taken a separate vehicle.) Lemmon, Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and movie director Billy Wilder were among the pallbearers, attesting to the level to which Ernie Kovacs had risen in the entertainment field — and that TCM will acknowledge on what would have been his 100th birthday.

New-Style Parking Meters to Have Three-Month Trial on Part of Broadway

Mayor Jimmy Davis announced that the City of Bayonne will try out new-style parking meters on Broadway for three months, beginning in late January, at some point after January 21, weather and installation permitting. The trial run will cover the East and West sides of Broadway between 22nd and 25th Streets. The new Mackay brand meters will serve two vehicles instead of one. Mayor Davis said, "The goal of the trial program is to test new equipment that would be less expensive to maintain while proving greater convenience to local drivers." Each new meter will have a display area that will show time paid for the vehicle in front of the meter and the vehicle behind the meter. The display screen will prompt motorists about making payments. Display arrows will indicate which space the motorist has purchased, either the one in front of, or the one behind, the meter.

The new meters will accept coins, credit cards (Master Card, Visa, and Discover), and debit cards with those same three credit card brands. There will be a fifty-cent convenience fee to make payments with credit and debit cards, because the card companies charge transaction fees to the Bayonne Parking Utility and all other vendors. The twenty-eight new meters will offer a new advantage to motorists: a ten-minute grace period for anyone purchasing an hour or more of parking. After buying an hour or more, the motorist will automatically receive a ten-minute bonus at the end of the time purchased. Otherwise, existing meter charges and parking times available for purchase will remain in effect. There is a maximum of two hours that can be purchased at an on-street parking meter in Bayonne.

The new meters are being tested during early and mid-January. The area between 22nd Street and 25th Street was chosen for the new meter trial, because it is a heavily trafficked part of the central business district. The trial run will take place from late January to late April. City officials will evaluate the effectiveness of the new meters as they consider parking technologies for the longer term. An announcement of a decision about the future of local parking meters will be made later this year.

The parking meter system is managed by the Bayonne Parking Utility, which is part of the municipal Department of Public Safety.

HOLLYWOOD — Steve Carell became a star because of the TV series "The Office" (2005-2013) and film hits like "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" (2005), "Evan Almighty" (2008) and "Crazy, Stupid, Love" (2011), among others, switching from comedy to drama at will. In 2018, he gave us the dramas "Beautiful Boy," "Welcome to Marwen" and the biographical comedy/drama "Vice," in which he's Donald Rumsfeld to Christian Bale's Vice President Dick Cheney. Carell is returning to series TV in Apple's "Top of the Morning" (a look at the making of a morning show), starring alongside Reese Witherspoon and Jennifer Aniston. Isn't "Murphy Brown" doing that already?

Die-hard "X-Men" fans can prepare for the 12th installment of the franchise, "X-Men: Dark Phoenix," which finished shooting in October 2017 to begin a year of post-production. However, the November 2018 opening was pushed back to June 7, 2019, due to extensive reshooting that was required. Michael Fassbender kept busy shooting "Kung Fury II" (based on the video game), with Arnold Schwarzenegger and David Hasselhoff, for release this year, while James McAvoy shot the superhero thriller "Glass," with Bruce Willis, Samuel L. Jackson and Sarah Paulson, and "It: Chapter Two," due Sept. 19. Jennifer Lawrence took some well-deserved time off, while Nicholas Hoult shot two films, the Australian Western

"The True History of the Kelly Gang," with Russell Crowe, and "The Banker," with Samuel L. Jackson and Anthony Mackie.

Another busy actor is Sylvester Stallone, who just rode the crest of "Creed II" to over $150 million at the box office and completed "Backtrace," with Matthew Modine and Colin Egglesfield. Stallone has finished filming "Rambo V: Last Blood" for release this year. For fun he produced the low-budget film "Street Justice," written, directed and starring Chuck Zito, with Pamela Anderson, Frank Grillo, Michael Nouri ("Flashdance") and a host of the best character actors you'll see anywhere.

Thad Luckinbill played J.T. Hellstrom on "The Young and the Restless" from 1999-2010 and returned in 2017. He has an identical twin, Trent (12 minutes younger), who is a lawyer and his producing partner. Thad married his "Y&R" co-star Amelia Heinle in 2007; they had a son and a daughter together, but divorced in 2017. Thad and his brother have produced nine films, including "Sicario" (2015), which earned $85 million, and were executive producers of "La La Land" (2016), which turned a $30 million investment into $450 million, and "Sicario: Day of the Soldado" (2018), with Benicio Del Toro and Josh Brolin, which earned $76 million. On April 13, 2018, the handsome Thad's character on "Y&R" was terminated when he was hit on the back of the head with a fireplace poker. ... Thad went out with a thud!

tastytv by George Dickie Cooking Channel's 'Food Truck Nation' spotlights imaginative cuisine gone mobile

It's not often you hear restaurant owners say nice things about food trucks, what with the business they tend to take away. So when Los Angeles-based chef and restaurateur Brad Miller extols their virtues on his new Cooking Channel series "Food Truck Nation," his words resonate.

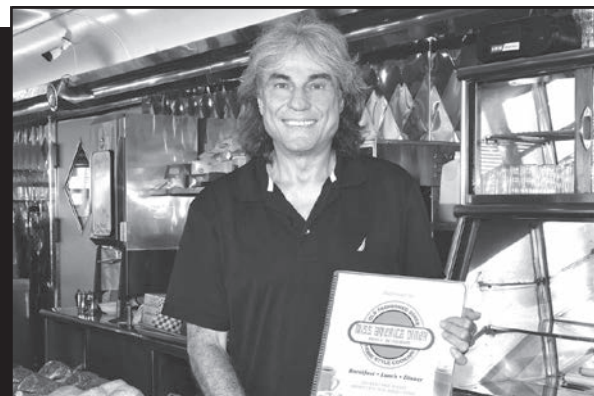

"Some of these people are putting out sometimes Michelin-level food on food trucks," he says. "The cool thing about all these food trucks for me is just that they have so much creativity and so much energy and the reason is because when people find out about them, they go to them. ... Because people are checking their Instagram or checking their Twitter, they're checking their Facebook just to go for that cuisine. They're going there specifically for those food items, for exactly what you're doing."

In the six-episode half-hour series, which premieres Tuesday, Jan. 22, Miller heads to different points across the country to sample some of the unique and varied creations coming out of these mobile kitchens, such as the surf and turf burrito from the Bibuta food truck in Minneapolis; the Belgian waffles topped with cookie butter from Belgian Waffle Crafters in Durham, N.C.; the funnel cake courtesy of Drizzle Truck in California; and the wood-fired Neapolitan-style pizza produced in under 90 seconds by Blue Fire Pizza in St. Paul, Minn.

But in Tuesday's opener, Miller stays local to check out Billionaire Burger Boyz in South Central Los Angeles, home of the Hello Burger, which is an oversized beef patty stuffed with Cajun grilled shrimp.

"It's like literally a burger where they cook cheese and shrimp in the inside of the burger and it has like two fried eggs on it, and a lobster. It's insane," he says. "You take a bite and it's like leaking shrimp. Cannot not hear about it if you live in L.A."

And while that was a culinary delight, Miller says equally as impressive was the subject of an episode airing later in the season, Bibuta's surf and turf burrito. The invention of owner and master sushi chef Billy Tserenbat, it's filled with raw tuna and wagyu beef and was, says Miller, "one of the best things I have ever tasted."

"They do the rice paper on the outside; that's your tortilla, sort of," he explains. "And then on the inside he does tuna, scallions and then he does basically like a reduction of soy sauce, sugar, ginger and a little bit of sesame seed oil and he just purees that up and that gets drizzled over that. And then he does the A5 wagyu cut in little pieces, cut into strips, and he actually sears them ... with salt and he gently places them in the burrito and then rolls it up with the sushi rice and paper.

"I was shocked," he continues. "I mean, the whole crew was like, this is one of the best things I've ever tasted." And it's in Minnesota. It's really cool."
