'iZombie' rises once more for its last CW season

By Jay Bobbin

For several years, Rose McIver has enjoyed an actor's ideal by having a different role in each episode of a series.

Rose McIver stars in the final season of "iZombie" starting Thursday on the CW.

Actually, all of those characters have been rolled into one: Liv, the Seattle-based morgue employee and member of the undead who assumes the lives of deceased people ... by consuming their brains. The feast is nearing its end, though, since The CW's comic-book-inspired "iZombie" begins its fifth and final season Thursday, May 2.

"We're all kind of pinching ourselves that we got five seasons of a show we loved, and that everybody got along," says pleasant New Zealand native McIver. "It certainly has provided its share of challenges. It can be quite intimidating to play Liv and all the things she's thrown into, but at the same time, it's what has kept the show so fresh and alive. It's been a dream job, really."

In her bid "to keep Liv grounded," McIver credits executive producers Rob Thomas and Diane Ruggiero-Wright ("Veronica Mars") and the "iZombie" creative team with also helping her keep Liv "someone you actually care about amidst the novelty. The writers are so brilliant, their wonderful imaginations have done a lot to help me, but I was concerned about finding the detail and nuance between (Liv's alter egos). It's been tricky, but I think we've pulled it off."

One side effect of making "iZombie," McIver notes, is that she's "incredibly respectful of people who work in morgues and deal with autopsies. Maybe I'm sort of (queasy) when I see a liver or a spleen sitting in a dish, but I've seen enough of those now to make myself bizarrely comfortable with it."

Seen previously on "Once Upon a Time" (as Tinker Bell) and "Masters of Sex," McIver also has been comfortable with many of Liv's personalities, making her hard-pressed to name favorites. "It's kind of like choosing favorite children," she reasons. "I feel guilty, because all the writers have done so much to bring them to life. During this last season, I get to play a very codependent salsa dancer — and with any nod toward the dance direction, I feel like I'm five years old again. That was a lot of fun."

Much like Liv may never die, "iZombie" could have future life if McIver has any say. "Who knows? Down the line, I'd be the first to jump in for a spinoff film. In this final season, you see that the other characters also are able to throw their hats in the ring, so to speak. You start thinking of the combinations and dynamics you can put up. It's a clever device, and I'm happy that we've been able to extend it so much." "

Mayor Davis Announces Progress for Ferry Plans and Schools in State of the City Speech

Before an audience of local business people, municipal officials, and others, Mayor Jimmy Davis delivered Bayonne's annual State of the City address on April 16. Speaking at a dinner sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Davis affirmed that ferry service for Bayonne remains "a top priority." He said that a Bayonne-to-New York ferry will be in operation next year for daily commuters. Making use of a $650,000 federal grant, Mayor Davis announced that Bayonne will use a car ferry to serve as the docking and ticketing facility for the new commuter boat.

After years of being underfunded by the State of New Jersey, Mayor Davis said, the Bayonne school system is receiving additional millions of state dollars, and will be offering full-day pre-kindergarten classes for four-year-olds this autumn.

Mayor Davis discussed recent construction and development in the community. He touted the completion of the 19 East apartment complex (East 19th Street) and the Hudson Flats at 14th St. and Broadway. He also mentioned buildings under construction on Broadway, Avenue E, and the former Military Ocean Terminal. The local chief executive pointed out that we have new restaurants, retail stores, and service businesses "opening virtually every week" in Bayonne. As a result of these openings, he said, "I do enjoy and take pride in being called 'the ribbon-cutting mayor.'" Mayor Davis said that the recent opening of the Costco wholesale store was the result of "vision, planning, and hard work." Summarizing the development trends, Mayor Davis said, "Bayonne is the next new," and "we are finally back on the map."

He thanked the City Council for exhibiting "political courage" and doing "the right thing" when they voted for tax incentives for developers.

Discussing the City of Bayonne's finances, Mayor Davis stated that, when he took office in 2014, there was an operating budget deficit of $25 million. He said that he has reduced that figure to $18.5 million, and that Bayonne is moving towards "fiscal solvency and responsibility."

Mayor Davis announced that he has been discussing new ideas for the Bayonne public schools with the Bayonne Board of Education. Those ideas include exploring middle schools, developing a plan to re-organize the current neighborhood school districts, and constructing new school buildings for the community. He said that some of the public school buildings are over 100 years old, and that it was time to stop putting "Band-Aids" on old schools.

On quality-of-life issues, Mayor Davis pointed to recent analysis that show Bayonne as the seventh safest city in New Jersey and the twenty-fourth safest city in the country. He said that his Administration's program of park improvements would continue throughout Bayonne. The reconstructed Neil DeSena Park at 52nd Street and Avenue C will re-open soon, he announced.

Mayor Davis thanked Recreation Supervisor Pete Amadeo for developing programs for children and adults with special needs. He pointed in particular to the Buddy Baseball program as proof that the Bayonne "community cares for its own." With 111 participants, Buddy Baseball will launch its season with an opening day parade on May 4, Mayor Davis said. He indicated that the arts have grown in Bayonne in recent years. He pointed to such programs as new murals, utility box art, and concerts at the Bayonne Community Museum. Mayor Davis also cited the Hometown Fair, the Bergen Point Festival, and the Food Truck Festival as examples of growing opportunities to have fun in Bayonne.

Mayor Davis said, "There is nothing better than standing here as Mayor of the City of Bayonne during its 150th anniversary." After noting that Bayonne has experienced "many ups and downs" during its history, he pointed to one constant: the belief that Bayonne has "a bright future ahead."

Predicting that today's Bayonne children will have "great memories" of growing up in Bayonne, Mayor Davis called our community "a vibrant, active, electrifying city." He concluded by saying that he would continue working to make Bayonne "the best city in the world."

HOLLYWOOD

By Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD — Matt Damon has completed "Ford v. Ferrari," with Christian Bale (for Nov. 15 release) and has turned his attention to being executive producer for the Netflix six-episode comedy-anthology series "Green Beret's Guide to Surviving the Apocalypse," starring Daril Fannin and Shawn Vance, and the Showtime psychological horror film "City on a Hill," starring Kevin Bacon. Bacon has just completed filming "You Should Have Left," with Amanda Seyfried.

With "Cats" and "Wicked" headed for the big screen, Tristar Pictures has announced its remake of the 1950 MGM musical "Guys & Dolls," which starred Marlon Brando, Frank Sinatra, Jean Simmons (of "Spartacus" not "Kiss") and Vivian Blaine. The original 1950 Broadway show won five Tony Awards and the 1992 revival, with Nathan Lane, was a big hit. Trouble is, the plotline was already dated when they made the 1955 film, and where will they ever find stars of the caliber of the original?

Also getting a reboot is "Fantasy Island," with Michael Pena assuming the Ricardo Montalban role of "Mr. Rourke." Also on board are "Designated Survivor's" Maggie Q, "Pretty Little Liars' Lucy Hall and "Reign's" Prince Henri, Nick Slater.

TV legend Carol Burnett is joining forces with Tina Fey, Eric Gurian and Steven Rogers to co-produce a film of her 2013 bestselling book, "Carrie And Me: A Mother-

Carol Burnett

Daughter Love Story." Carol once introduced me to Carrie, and she was sweet, bright and very talented. She overcame an addiction to drugs only to succumb to cancer in 2002 at age 38.

Zac Efron, fresh from playing serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer in Netflix's "Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil and Vile," is getting a change of pace in the animated reboot of the Scooby-Doo feature film, "Scoob," with Efron as the voice of Fred, Amanda Seyfried as Daphne, Will Forte as Shaggy and Gina Rodriguez as Velma, due May 2020. Veteran voice actor Frank Welker will be Scooby-Doo.

Former series stars making pilots to return to series on ABC TV are "Parenthood's" Dax Shepard and "Boston Legal's" Lake Bell in "Bless the Mess"; "Veeps' Matt Walsh, "Reba's" JoAnna Garcia and "Ugly Betty's" Vanessa Williams in "Happy Accident"; and "Married With Children's" Katey Sagal in "Nana." "Dr. Ken" Ken Jeong will become "The Emperor of Malibu," while "Grey's Anatomy's" Katherine Heigl takes on "Our House." Meanwhile, now that Rami Malek is a best-actor Oscar winner for "Bohemian Rhapsody," the USA Network has given his "Mr. Robot" the pink slip.

Another series becoming a feature film is "Deadwood," which ran on HBO from 2004-06 and was nominated for 28 Emmy awards, winning eight. The story reunites Ian McShane, Timothy Olyphant, Brad Dourif and Gerald McRaney 10 years after the series ended. Guess it wasn't such "Deadwood" after all!

Their rhythm still gets you: PBS special fetes Gloria and Emilio Estefan

By Jay Bobbin

It's hard, if not impossible, to question Gloria and Emilio Estefan receiving an award for popular music.

The couple's writing, producing and performing skills have been evident for decades, extending to their story being told in the stage hit "On Your Feet!" They're given the Library of Congress Gershwin Prize for Popular Song in a PBS telecast Friday, May 3 (check local listings). Rita Moreno and Andy Garcia host the program taped in Washington, D.C., and featuring performances by Jose Feliciano, Cyndi Lauper, Il Volo and the Estefans' daughter Emily. Quincy Jones also appears.

The musical couple is saluted in Friday's new PBS special "Gloria and Emilio Estefan: Library of Congress Gershwin Prize for Popular Song" (check local listings).

With a career marked by such tunes as "Conga" and "Rhythm Is Gonna Get You," Gloria Estefan explains, "Music was what got me through my toughest times as a kid, when my dad was very ill. He came back from Vietnam with Agent Orange poisoning. I would lock myself up in my room and use other people's songs; I would learn to play them on my guitar and literally cry by myself. I wanted to be strong for my mom, so I have a very deep respect and love for music in general."

Emilio Estefan recalls, "When I met Gloria, I didn't even think she would be part of my band. I went to see her because she was singing in a church, and I loved her voice. Then, probably six months later, I was playing a wedding and she came in. I said, 'Why don't you play one song with us?' And I really loved the whole thing.

"I was putting an ensemble together that became the Miami Sound Machine," adds Emilio. "Combining the base of rhythm, we found this fusion of sounds — and then with a girl singing, I think it was something fresh. We did the first album, and with a small label, we became No. 1 on the charts."

Previous Gershwin Prize honorees include Paul Simon, Stevie Wonder, Sir Paul McCartney, Carole King, the team of Burt Bacharach and Hal David, Billy Joel, Willie Nelson, Smokey Robinson and Tony Bennett. This year marks the first time the award has been given to a married couple, and to Hispanic talents.

Citing composers George and Ira Gershwin among her influences, Gloria Estefan — a Kennedy Center Honors recipient and three-time Grammy Award winner — notes, "I always try to either inspire or communicate with another person through my songs, whether they be romantic or not, and always from a position of strength and optimism. I'm very conscious of the power of music and what it does."

So is husband Emilio, though he also knows the power of Gloria. "I really loved the way she sang," he reflects, "and then I loved her."

Cassie Bishop (Harriet Dyer) sees dead people, which she views as a mixed blessing at best. She's empathetic enough to help them with problems left unresolved at their time of death, however. Her gifts also make her a valuable contributor to investigations by Detective Tom Hackett (Paul Blackthorne), a longtime friend, and his new partner, ex-FBI agent Damien Asante (Justin Cornwell). Anne-Marie Johnson also stars in this new procedural drama.

IN FOCUS

"Deadwood: The Movie" (HBO — TV movie premiere, May 31)

Based on the Emmy Award-winning drama series, which made its debut 15 years ago, this film reunites original cast members Ian McShane, Timothy Olyphant, Molly Parker, Paula Malcomson and John Hawke, among others. Alliances are tested, old rivalries are rekindled and past wounds are sure to be reopened as the passing of time sees everyone trying to navigate modern advances. David Milch serves as writer and executive producer.

IN FOCUS

"The Radkes" (USA Network — series premiere, June 4)
